When we think of art, we probably think of painting a picture on strong cloth or special paper, even on the walls of a city. However, in many cultures, people paint on their faces instead.

①_____

In fact, face painting may be the very first form of art. Painted faces are in different colors and patterns. This has been part of people's traditions for thousands of years. The way that people painted their faces can tell stories and lessons from the past.

②_____

People still paint their faces for lots of reasons. Patterns on faces connect people to a tribal (部落的) family and can show who is the most important in the family. For fighters, it is a way to make their enemies afraid. Face painting is also used in many ceremonies and special celebrations.

How is face painting important in theater?

Face painting was important in ancient Japanese and Chinese ceremonies. It was also used in traditional theaters to change the actors' roles. Actors in those countries still wear white, black, and red face paint today to show feelings and make the bad people look dramatic (戏剧性的) and awful.

③_____

Tribal people make face paint from the natural colors in plants and earth. Plant parts are used to make different colorings. The ingredients are dried over a fire and then made into a powder (粉末). This is then mixed with animal fat.

The History and Future of Comic Strips

Have you ever read a comic strip in a newspaper or online? You know, those funny little stories with pictures and speech bubbles? They might seem simple, but comic strips have a rich history and a bright future. Let's dive into their story and see how they have ____ 40 ____ over time!

Comic strips started over a century ago. At first, they were short, funny stories in newspapers. People loved them because they were easy to read and made them laugh. Early comic strips often had regular ____ 41 ____ who often got into silly situations. These strips became so popular that they helped sell more newspapers.

As time went on, comic strips changed gradually. They weren't just funny anymore. Some told ____ 42 ____ stories or explored deep themes. Artists experimented with different styles, and new characters were created. Comic strips became a way to entertain people, share ideas and even express opinions on society.

However, in recent years, the comic strip market has become weaker. Fewer people read newspapers, which used to be the main home for comic strips. Many newspapers have reduced the ____ 43 ____ for comics or stopped printing them at all. This has made it harder for artists to earn money from their work. Some people worry that traditional comic strips might disappear, replaced by faster, shorter forms of entertainment like videos.

But don't worry! Comic strips are still alive! Today, they've found a new home. Many artists create digital comic strips and share them ____ 44 _____. This has made comic strips easier to find than ever. People from all over the world can enjoy them with just a click.

What about the future? Comic strips will likely keep changing. With new technology, we might see more interactive comic strips. Readers can click or swipe to create the story. Some artists use AI to bring their strips to life. The ____ 45 ____ are endless!

So, whether you're a longtime fan or new to comic strips, there's something for everyone. What's your favorite comic strip? Let me know. I'd love to hear about it!

七、任务型阅读(共 10 分)

请认真阅读下面的短文，并根据短文内容回答问题。

Fengxiang clay figurines are a well-known form of traditional Chinese folk art from Fengxiang County, Shaanxi Province. With a history of thousands of years—dating back to the Neolithic Age, these vivid and colorful sculptures are not only works of art but also an important symbol of Shaanxi's rich culture, deeply loved by people both at home and abroad.

In the early days, local people used clay to make simple daily tools and objects for worship. As pottery-making skills continued to develop, the art of clay figurine-making slowly took shape. It finally reached its golden age during the Ming and Qing dynasties, becoming popular among common people and widely used in festivals, weddings and other important events to bring joy and good wishes.

Their production process is complex and needs great patience. First, artisans choose high-quality local clay. Next, they knead, pound and filter it to take out impurities (杂质). Then, they shape the clay into lively forms like tigers and historical characters by hand or simple tools. After that, the shaped clay goes through natural drying and high-temperature firing. Finally, the most important step—painting—is carried out, with bold, bright colors to create strong visual contrast.

These clay figurines carry deep cultural meanings. For example, tiger-shaped figurines are believed to drive off evil spirits and bring good luck to families. To protect this valuable traditional art, the local government has set up training centres to teach young people the making skills, while some young artisans are trying new things through mixing traditional styles with modern designs to attract more young people.

46. Where are Fengxiang clay figurines from?

47. When did Fengxiang clay figurines enter their golden age?

48. How many steps are required to make Fengxiang clay figurines?

49. What does the local government do to protect Fengxiang clay figurines?

50. How can you keep traditional arts like Fengxiang clay figurines alive? (自拟一句话回答)
